(March 31, 2008) U.S. Congress demands Bush administration support for Jews harmed by the Arab-Israeli conflict – The U.S. Congress has drafted a bill that demands U.S. recognition that the Jews who left Arab countries be considered refugees and asked the Bush administration to use this policy in international resolutions related to resolving the issue of Palestinian refugees. The draft bill claims that 850,000 Jews left Arab countries due to the Arab-Israeli conflict, which the Congress says is bigger than the number of Palestinians who were forced to flee in 1948.
